Course Overview:

The thought of retirement is usually dreaded by many people. Men and women are gripped with fears as they move closer to the shores of retirement. Retirement is an issue that affects everyone, not because it is a journey that all would definitely go through as long as there is life; but because it looks frightening when you turn back and see the agonies of some people who did not plan for it. Though most organizations do recognize it, but do so with levity. As such, the need for retirement training and counseling for employees cannot therefore be over emphasized.

Planning for retirement encompasses giving thought to lifestyle expectations and choices. It also involves setting realistic goals and constructing a plan to achieve retirement dreams.
